<https://www.texastribune.org/2017/08/29/four-things-houston-area-leaders-must-do-prevent-future-flooding-disas/>

An unprecedented amount of rain has fallen on the Houston area in the past few days, causing what's likely the worst flooding event that the nation's sixth-largest metropolitan area has ever. This may seem like a freak occurrence. But it's the third catastrophic flooding event this region of 6.5 million people has experienced in three years. And scientists and other experts say that much of the devastation could have been prevented.

16 — Port of New Orleans wants to clean up its brownfields, Louisiana Weekly, 8/28/17

<http://www.louisianaweekly.com/port-of-new-orleans-wants-to-clean-up-its-brownfields/>

Polluted sites with vacant or falling structures along the Industrial Canal, including one in New Orleans East and others in the Florida Avenue Turning Basin in the Upper Ninth Ward, are slated for an eventual cleanup. In January, the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency gave a $200,000 Brownfields Area-Wide Planning Grant to the Port of New Orleans so that it can find ways to rehabilitate its decaying waterfronts.
